

Apply to be part of a special cohort of doctoral students in special education at the Department of Educational Psychology at Texas A&M University.

Project RISE Scholars Network: Research-based Interventions in Special Education

Purpose: Project RISE Scholars Network will prepare PhD students in Special Education to provide and design effective interventions for children with disabilities across a range of populations and contexts and to prepare future special education personnel who are skilled at implementing evidence-based interventions.

Project RISE Scholars Network funding package:

- fully paid tuition and all mandatory university fees for the 5-year duration of the Project RISE Scholars Network,
- fully paid university health insurance,
- a monthly stipend,
- a new computer with software,
- financial support for additional travel and professional development opportunities.

Contact: Principal Investigator at Texas A&M University: Dr. Florina Erbeli erbeli@tamu.edu